

A. He died on or about January 30 in Brunswick.

Q. Did he leave a will?

A. Not to my knowledge, and I, personally, searched through his belongings, both where he was staying and over at his house on Ninth Avenue, and we could find no trace of a will.

Q. What property, that is, real estate, did your father leave when he died?

A. Well, at the time of his death he owned two lots on Ninth Avenue. They were just described by my brother, Melvin, and I agree with his description of the property.

Q. What is your idea of the value of the property?

A. I estimate it at $4,000.00.

Q. Are you familiar with values of real estate in and around Brunswick.

A. Pretty much so. I don't own anything in Brunswick, but I go to a number of the sales and it is my opinion that the place, including the extra lot, should bring about $4,000.00.

Q. What descendants and heirs did your father leave at his death?

A. The way I figure them is as follows: three sons, Adam, Charles, and Melvin. Descendants through James H. Thompson are one granddaughter, Thelma Forrest, and two great granddaughters, Virginia Copenhaver and Betty Lee Carr. Grandchildren through a deceased daughter, Cora M. Lloyd, these being William, Ernest, and Melvin Lloyd, and Virginia M. Wisner, and the following children of my deceased brother, Reed T. Thompson, Jr., these being all grandchildren of my father, and they are: Mary Cooper, Dorothy Wall, Daisy Jones, Nellie Crim, Garnetta Everhart, Gertrude Reed, Viola Racey, Reed T. Thompson, III, William Thompson, Imogene Thompson, and Ernest Schnauffer Thompson, who the family usually calls John.

Q. State whether or not your interest is susceptible to a partition in kind and whether or not this property can be divided fairly amongst all of the heirs without loss or injury.

A. No sir, it couldn't possibly be, because it would have to be split up into 264 parts and then divided amongst children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren. The only way to divide it is to have it sold and have the money from the sale divided amongst the heirs.
